

WARNING!

Same Sex Couples Visiting South Australia

Be aware that your relationship is NOT legally recognised in South Australia

This means that while in South Australia:

- You can be denied access to your sick partner if they are hospitalised.
- You can be denied access to any information about their medical condition.
- You can be denied the right to participate in making vital decisions about your incapacitated partner's medical treatment.
- If your partner dies, you can be denied the right to make any decisions about their body.
- You cannot claim compensation if your partner dies in an accident.
- You cannot claim compensation for the grief you suffer if your partner is killed as a result of a criminal injury.
- You can be required to give evidence in court against your partner if they are charged with a criminal offence.

"We'll do the right thing ... but we're going to do it properly, and I won't be rushed into anything."

SA Premier Mike Rann (on why it's taken five years to introduce legislation to give equal rights to same sex couples), Channel 9 News Adelaide 14/10/2006